

Introduction to Ethics of Media Interaction – Transcript

Glenn Marks: I have the pleasure of introducing Dr. Cortney Warren on the fascinating and timely topic of mental health professionals interacting with the media. Cortney, can you just briefly describe what's covered in this course?

Cortney Warren: We as mental health professionals are increasingly offered opportunities to interact with the media. We might be asked to participate in a podcast or interviewed by a reporter on a current event. So this course is really an attempt to walk you through what that looks like. Reviewing some of the key benefits and ethical dilemmas that you really need to think about before you engage with the media. Offering also a few practical recommendations for any of you who might want to interact with the media more in your professional life.
